Dear Harold,

Lifton refers to his camoflage theory on p. 288

Some of the documents I received from DOJ have me confused. Their legal memos regarding eminent domain legislation for the WC exhibits mention JFK's coat, shirt and tie. Yet, these were not condemned, but became part of the Marshall-GSA letter agreement. Why is this? And why is it that the x-rays and photos — even though not WC exhibits — were not condemned. Note that their memos on drafting legislation date back to April '65, the same month Burkley & Bouck transferred the autopsy materials to the Archives.

One of the DOJ lawyers, Lloyd Weinreb, is now a law professor at Harvard. Jerry is willing to go question Weinreb on these points & asked I send him copies of Weinreb's and other related DOJ documents, but I'd like your thoughts before I prime Jerry with questions. I'm considering going up to Boston myself, if Jerry finds Weinreb willing to cooperate.

Best,

Jean
